Having announced mysell as a cambidate tor the Legislature to fill the vacancy in the Seventh and Elghth Wards, it may be proper for me to state some of my views upon the questions of the day. In the last campaign I ardently supported John Bell, because I believed that his election would give peace and prosperity to the country. Threatened as the Union now is with leading dissolved, it should be the duty of every man to exert himself to restore transmilly. If the voters of the Segurity and to such an end. The Unitednet on promises most certainly meet my most beserve approval as a basis of sertiment, and I should arge their formal presents also to the various Northern Legislatures as an anomalment to the Constitution. I should also advocate the appointment of Commissioners, equal in numbers to the electoral vote, to most similar Commissioners from the other State States, which have not withdrawn from the Union, and let them also endeavor to present some acceptable lastis of compromise both to the Northern and Southern States. Whilst not wanting in regard and reneration for the Union, I must frankly state that I would not consent to see Kentneky dishonored; and if no symptoms of conciliation should be shown by the Republicans action should be shown by the Republicans distoned the state of the Republicans.

with the Unitch, under the Mosaie Hispen-sation, from the settlement in Canaan un-ill the time of Christ, fourteen and a baif centuries after, a glance at the Bible re-cord, which we will produce, will con-vincingly prove. That slavery existed and was recognized in the Church, from the time of Christ till new, a period of eighteen centuries, all history acknowledges. These facts cannot be gainsayed, and they show that if religion is opposed to slavery, thir-ty-three centuries have failed to develop its gendency. And this the answer to those Ho we not perceive here a most marked similarity with slavery in the South? Nor was this law a dead letter on the stantebook. be brethren. Is not the whole tand hence there is a xiii, 0.

It is certainly a most momentous question which a Christian minister has to decide for himself, when he remembers the solenn rows of his ordination. What should be his course when his public teaching in defense of the truth secus to require trenching in pen the political matters of the day? That, as a general rule, he should eschew polities, and enter not within the contentions arena, which so tends to degrade the divine mission with which he is entrusted, is not to be denied, and so he hearns from the practice of his divine master. But when grave issues are before the people, when their very essence embraces truths which alone are to be determined by the Bible, the minister of fiod would be dereliet to his duty did he not use lakest endeavors to instruct on these points, to counsel ment oact in the right, and to exhort them to remember they are brethren. When such are cocasions arise, he has the same blessed example of all Christian industration to appeal to. Whou Casar's penny was handed to our Savlour, he at once determined what was clearly the duty of all who lived mader Casar: to pay him tribute. And he practically followed out his teaching in paying tribute, not only for himself but for letter. Henceforth, the subordination of the Church to the State, became a law to the rhilliter of God. And by this decision has brea overthrown all the sophistical and ruinous arguments which would make a Church the ulstress of the world.

which would make a Church the inlatress of the world.

These perilous times which quicken apprehensions within all men's uninds, has seemed to us to render fitting some remarks upon certain Christian and moral points which are presented in the crishs now about to come upon us.

1st. Is it agreeable with the principles of our holy religion to hold shares?

ty-three centuries have failed to develop its fendency. And this is the answer to those who ascribe this tendency to religion in both of its parts—to the Mosaic Dispensation and to the Christian, which, at the present day, emblaces both bond and free with its fold. There is clearly no tendency to Abolitionism in religion. In climate, in soll, in occupations, we grant there is, and hence our Northern States, and all civilized regions of conniry lying it positions anneongenial to slavery, gradually get rid of their slaves.

But does the Ribbs heritanic

rupt Church of Rome? We all acknowledge the right of creleslastical secession, and surely the right politically is not less ours. The American Revolution bears the vidence of this on its front.

Some have supposed insuperable objections to be in the way of our secession.
That imasunch as the Union is of "we the people," secession is not allowable unless a uniquity decide for it. Two very considwith its fold. There is clearly no tendency to Abolitionism in religion. In climate, in sold, in occupations, we grant there is, and all civilized regions of country lying in positions nacongenial to shevery, gradually get rid of their shaves.

But does the Bible legitimize shavery, we read many passages in the Old Testament to this effect: "Proclaim liberty throughout all the land, untotall the inhabitants thereof." "It a man he found stealing any of his brethren of the children of Israel, and maketh merchandize of him, or selleth him, then that thief shall die." "Thou shall not deriver muto his master that these words concern? We have the record of the swinds people themselves. Helrows were not to be made slaves of; they were held to be made slaves of; they were held to be made slaves of; they were held to be made slaves of; they were from the minority, who did his formation, one to the other. They could be bound as servants; but, when the gradient of the contract of the leaving procession, the language of one of the contract of the leaving procession, the language of one of the contract of the leaving of the swared states and all the leaving of the swared states and all passed on the resonable of the swared states and all passed on the resonable of the language of one of the contract, and that swared the contract of the language of one of the swared states and all passed and ratileation of the Constitution, and shall be thim go free from thee. There should be just causes for separation there the inited (clonies of America set forth in the Declaration of Independence, And the South lave now declared theirs by the mouth of South Carolina, which Providence has permitted to be foremost in the great movement; of time day.

If it he, then, our firm conviction that slavery is no sin, that it is agreeable with the principles of our holy religion, it because its On preserve the institution was allowable ways. The mere holding of an abstract opinion, without any action more rights when assailed, in all just and silvent assailed, in all just and allowable ways. The mere holding of an abstract opinion, without any action may not rights when assailed, in all just and it has a series worlly the mane of a settled contriction. If action then is our duty, what action is bast? We of the South have already for years past agreed this question of shavery with the North. It is true they pushed it upon us. We were calmly excressing our just rights without our consciences repreaching as, when they declared shavery to be a sin, and must be done-away with. We have met them in discussion on the floors of Congress, and now, after twanty-five years of a public exciptment on this question, instead of the North world, which was only a supple who have allowed the formation and out after twanty-five years of a public exciptment on this question, instead of the North leaving to no the management of our twen domestic institution—we have their openly declared hording that hostility shall be liberty to ask the contract of the principle which make the result of the principles and the contract of the principles of the principle which make the principle of the principle which make the principle of consume the vitals of both North and South.

And now, brethren, as we draw these thoughts and convictions to a close, we might be charged with not having duly awaited the issue of events. We might be told of efforts now being made by the lovers of union to have residued the hostile acts of our Northern brethren. But were these efforts to be successful, and we remain in the Union, we should seeme but a momentary calur. The causes which impel us to distuncion are too well founded, and are met by a public opinion at the North too deeply seated to be overcome by legislative chartments in our favor.—Besides, it is too late. The dle is cast—we have loused our tacklings—already the States have began to move and, before many suns roll round, a united South will stand before the world as the new nation on the Continent of America. We are incapable of weaving the web of future exents—they are hid in the inscrutable prescience of Jehovah. But an arm powerful to break down kingdoms and to huild up, a wisdom which knoweth all things, an Almighty God whose will is accomplishment, to thim we commend ourselves and all we have. May He grave us on the pulms of His lunds as His chosen people, and, after all the changes and chances of this mortal life are cuded, bring as all to eternal peace, happiness, and union in Heaven. are they constantly to wrangle and dispute, be in ill-blood and embitter existence so that there is no pleasure in it? Far better that they should separate even before angry words and actions have gained such masterly that blood begins to flow.—Such was the reasoning of Abraham to Lot: "Let there be no strife I pray thee between me and thee, and between my herdmen and thy herdmen, for we be brothere. Second thought I pray thee the gards nonders, we have, in the Church of God, seen the right of seession acted upon throughout all time. The first great exemplification of this in the Uhristian era was in the separation of the Greek Church from the Church of Rome. The Retornation on the Continent, under Luther, Melanttism, and Zuinglins, so glorious in its results to pure Christianity, and which gave the spur to that other movement in England, to which the Episcopal Church of America owes all the purity of ductrine she possesses; what were both these but separations from the same corrupt Church of Rome? We all acknowledge the right of crelesiastical secession,

If I were a member of your Legislature, I would pass all necessary laws for enrolling the militia, and I would make a large appropriation for arming them, upon the principle of self-preservation. I tell you, in all candor, that I would not be surprised to see a conflict of arms between hostile forces within ten days. This city is now beleaguered with troops. The traup of arms diener with the self-preservation of the false rumors started by Republicans, that it was the purpose of Virginia and Maryland to prevent Lincoln's inauguration here, by taking forcible possession of this Capitol, he ordering traops here, enrolling the milital of the District, and hy garrisoning the foresupon the Potomac, that have not been occupied for twenty years. The only hope to prevent war and perpendicular the tovernment, is, in my judgment, in a Southern Conference and reconstruction. The Union is stready disrupted—South Carolina out, and Georgia, Mississippi, Florida, and Alabama, will be in a few days. With these facts starting no in the face, with events of the most startling character following cach other in rapid succession, civil war impedding and almost an actuality, the dominant party arrogant, defant, and threatening, voting down even such propositions of compromise as no true triend of the South ought to take, and preparing in the Northern States, through their Legislatures, to curol their militia, voting millions to sustain their armies, I ask, in the mane of ordinary prudence, eats of any state, why she does not take steps to make h

Not only in the extreme Southern States is the jindependence of South Carolina openly recognized and applanded, but in the border States of Delaware and Virginia the news of the first step in sceession is received with joy, and welcomed by the explosion of guupowder and the plaudits of the ladies.

The South are terribly in earnest in this secession movement. It is no fauelful freak of hair-braiued fanales, striving to realize some abstract theory of morals, social perfection, or political economy, but the result of a long series of aggressions upon the property, the rights and the liberties of the South by a political party in the North, which has now obtained the nower to make good its threats against them, and either overwhelm them in ruin or make them submissives niljects of a sectional anti-slavery government. To submit to one or the other alternative would show our Southern brethren to the either unworthy of the blessings of eivilization or weak cowards, unable to appreciate their position or to save themselves from the fatal grasp of their enemies.

Nearly all classes of people lu the North are naturally loclined to regard the action of South Carolina as unadvisedly precipitate. It may be so. Many of the people of the South so regard it. There are, doubtless, not a few individuals in South Carolina who might have desired to pause and reflect before severing the relations existing between that State and the other members of the Confederacy. No great peoplar movement ever received the stamp of catire manimity. Our Revolution of Independence, which the world had udmitted to be as just a cause as ever a people ounged in, lea dight instance that no cause can be so ascred as to exempt it from fees. The Bostonians who consigned the British taxed tea to the waves were disguised as Indiaus, and there were those who did not hesitate publicly to denounce this destruction of property. It required the cloquent tonge of Patrick Henry to convince the remining doubters o VIS. Judge PIHTLE, CASSIUS CLAY, Judge ROBERTSON, Judge NICHOLAS, J. F. The larmer's first care for his stock should be warm shed and stable room for the whole herd. In our opinion, the stable is the most preditable. Stock, to do well must be kept warm, as it is impossible for them to more than live while shivering on the sumy side of the harm, stock ward, or Hay may be led once a day, and, as a rhange, ent straw, with the addition of a little corn or out neal, or shorts would be very advisable. Perhaps hay that la good does not require cutting, but shalks and straws repay cutting many field. We are satisfied that it would be economy in all respects to have a good straw cutter, and hires man, if necessary, to take care of the whole herd, rather than feed coarse folder whole.

ing of animals after drinking largely in mid-winter. To prevent this, they should nave it often, not less than twice a day.—It is the practice of many farmers to let sheep go without water, except that obtained by cating snow all through the winter. It is a great mietake. They will drink three or burtimes a day, when they can have water without trouble.

Salt is important in the winter treatment of all kinds of stock. A supply should be placed where they can obtain at any time. This may be done by putting sme lumps in a loox meder a sheet. They will taste a little nearly every day, never eating more than they need. When saited only at long intervals, they can too much, producing bad consequences.

One great object with farmers, in wintering stock, should be to make as much manure as possible, and save all that is made. For this purpose, if not kept in slables, the cattle should be contined to the vards. All manure dropped in the snow-pall, when wandering after water, or running at random over the fields, is nearly a loss. Domestic minals are the farmer's apparatus, by uncans of which his day, grain, straw, roots, etc., are manufactured into flesh, muscle, and bone, as well as claborated for manure, with which to feed the growing crop, and keep the whole larm in the best condition. They should claim a large share of the time and attention of every larmer, for those who give much care, reaps a rich reward.—[W. in Genesce Farmer.

Cold winds, and the "sere and yellow leaf" of autumn, forcibly remind the farmer of the necessity of early forethought and ample provision for the care of his stock through the coming winter. Upon the economical and successful wayin which this is accomplished depends, quite as much as upon any other thing, the success in stock-growing and in farming. innst be kept warm, as it is impossible for them to more than live while shivering on the sunny side of the barn, stock-yard, or rail feace. Every good farmer understands that a certain amount of animal head is to be kepting, and this is done by the consumption of hay, straw, and grain, as heat is kepting in a stove by the combustion of wood and coal. It is not proposed to enter into the chemical changes produced in the case of the food or wood—both are well admitted tratts—and the question presented to the farmer is, whether his animal or stove will be most easily and economically kept at a temperature under a well-constructed stable or house, or outside, exposed to the cold winds of our northern winter.

If you have the stables and sheds all prepared, you will make a note, and begin to look after the stock. You will find it bad economy to let them range through meadow, field, orchard, and wood, until compelled to come home by the thick falling snow. You may, it is true, have your mow and stacks untouched—but the cold frost-hitten grass has afforded so little nourishment that your stock has already lost flesh. Believe me, dear sir, every pound lost now will cost more than double the number to replace after they cone to dry food. NOTICE TO PHYSICIANS AND THE PUB LIC.

J. G. BRU/GS. Yours respectfully,
Yours respectfully,
Protrietor of the Braudceth House, New York,
There is nothing equal. In the way of a Plaster, to be Porous Plaster of Mr. ALLCOCK, Everything some stack in a distant field. Cattle will run over hay on the ground, and waste much of it. Stacking at best is but a poor method, for it will not take much cyphering to show that the waste in saving and leeding out of doors will soon pay for comfortable barns and feeding stalls. By beginning early to feed at night, the stock may run out days.

Good hay answers every purpose, but there are stalks, out and wheat straw, which farmers design as part of the forage for winter use. No one considers hread and meut alone palatable for himself and simily; neither should be early late to keep dearant about them. They are the Plaster o ie day, and a fit type of our present advancement science and art. and hire a man, if necessary, to take pare of the whole herd, rather than feed coarse fodder whole.

Roots should not be overlooked. To keep cattle in a good condition, they are very nutritions, and serve as a change from the dry food in general use. Carrots, inrips, and beets can be so easily and profitably grown that no good herdsman should dispense with them. They are easily kept and cut, and should be used more a day at least, mixed with cut atraw or stalks, or by themselves. It would be just as reasonable to keep the farmer's family on one kind of food through the winter, as to keep a herd of rattle on hay alone.—Variety is essential to a good appelite, and it is unquestionably true that roots will have the effect of making cattle more healthy, just as fresh food and vegetables are better for those who go down to the sam in great ships. Mony of the wasting and tatal diseasess which diminish the herd in the spring, in our opinion, night the prevented by a judicious use of roots and grain in winter.

Water should not be forgotten, when providing for stock. It is not enough that there is a brook in yonder hollow, near hardly afford to go so far in wet and muddiweather; and in the deep snow of mill winter, they will suffer for want of water should he in the yard, where it will be as warm as possible, and where cattle will be protected from the cold wind while drinks. Manure Cellars.

Often as we have set forth the importance of these cellars, or plis, for the manuacture and preservation of manure, we feel that the half has not been told. Our own successful use of such a cistern induces us to speak of it now. The farmer must prosper, if at all, by savings as well as by gainnes. If the banker's yault should have only a small hole where his deposits could be constantly lifelined away, it would diminish his annual gains decidedly. So, if the farmer's stock of manure is continually wasting it sun, and wind, and rain, he is a great and continual loser.

Manure, nixed from time to time with straw, leaves, and other refuse matter, in the open barmard, is better than that which is uncared for; but dung, both I quid and solid, carefully saved in a covered pit, and mixed every few days with plaster, charcosledust, dry muck, etc., ahsorbag every particle of furice, and preventing the greape of amonia, is better tells.

Our readers are, perhaps, somewhat for could be desired to the control of t sorting every particle of neige, and preventing the greape of amonia, is better still.

Our readers are, perhaps, somewhat familiar with the different methods of making these cellars. We will, however, briefly say, that they may be ding out of the ground four to six feet deep, and as wide as may be wanted, then planked up inmly or laid up with thew lees, the crevices cammed with clay; or they may be fault of stone, laid in waler-line cement. They is y be put underneath the stable, or partiy under and partly outside, but constructed so as to recei, et as dally cleaning of the stalls. If under the barm, the floors overhead should be made very light, so as to prevent the rising of pangent odors into the stalls and lefts above.

The providing of grota alterneuts for use in these cellars is a very Important resulter. If one has access to a peat hog, he ts well off. If not, let him go to the border, of his several lields, where the plaw and hog 2g not reach, and where the turf has become the 2g of first, but him cert off at admindance of fills, and alter for the stalls, the thin also go fe to keep it company a little at a fine, and aften or lacking such tarf, let thin ut of in selections, rather either will be of manner.

I he califfer LIVING put down for us by you
I is lie-only thing of the khal that we have ever ports. So much are we pleased within limit we would be very unwilling to have another curpet (old or new) put down without it. The difference between a room where it is used and where it is not, is so artiking as to arrest the attention of the most modservant. If its word more then it cost in the inreasons of iness and pleasund needs, give the one pet, in stating that it adds one half to the carpet's went,
If our recommendation of I will add anything to your sales we cheerfully give it, feeling we do you, ustours a much greater kindiess thom we do you.

If Mr. Adrian's reso lution, hereforer adopted, lad simply in dersed the conduct of Major Anderson ho would have voted for it, but he could not receive the permission of his taind to wast for the remainder of the resolution, and to say, by so doing, that he would induse every act which the President might regard as his constitutional duty in carrying out the every act which the President might regard as his constitutional duty in carrying on the laws and preserving the Union. While hi was for the Union, believing he thus requesented the people of Kentneky, he thought duty required us to pause before we periled the whole Union and bring on a general conflict and jutestine war.

Mr. M. did not believe in the right of a State to secole. He regarded this as the greatest believeded by any party, but while he said this, all limst recognize the right of revolution for the pesistance of oppression on one side to see sognize the right of revolution for the resistance of oppression on one side to see cure freedom on the other. He did not believe the time had come to resort to this means of redress, and precipitate so disgraceful a catastrophe. He did not believe the present was the proper time to send reinforcements to South Carolina and the other Southern States. We should hesitate and endeavor to get back by peace what nilght be rousidered necessary to secure by force. He would not have made this explanation, it it were not for the fact that he had received letters questioning or disapproving his centre for voting against man he had received letters questioning or disapproving his course for voting against Mr. Adrain's resolution. He reported that he fully indursed Major Auderson's con-duct, but he was unwilling in advance to indorse the conduct of the Adminis-tration.

Mr. SCOTT, rising to a question of privilege, said that Capl. Darling, the assistant doorkeeper, had ejected from the floor a visiting gentleman, who was admitted on the Democratic side of the House, and he requested him to leave, on the ground that it was contrary to the rules flooking to the Republican side]. He (Scott) said that there was one who was not a member, and yet was allowed to remain. It showed a disgusting partiality and prejudice.

The flouse went into Committee of the Whole on the State of the Union, and took up the army bill.
